How to manage Windows 10 notifications?

Action Center in Windows 10 is great for keeping all your notifications in one place. However, it can quickly become cluttered with messages you're not really interested in from apps you hardly ever use. Fortunately, you can switch those off.

1. Go to the Start menu and choose Settings
2. Click on System, then choose Notifications & Actions
3. Use the toggle switches to control how and when notifications appear, or if they appear at all. As well as controlling system level notifications, you can set them on a per-app basis.
